PLAYING TO WIN

Orin Solomon takes an unexpected path to total freedom.

by K.C. Barlow

As a college football player, Orin Solomon had dreams of playing in the NFL. When those dreams didn't materialize, he was still determined to achieve that same level of financial security. In 1993 he was introduced to ACN. "After about a year, I knew this was my opportunity," says Orin, a Senior Vice President with the company. "ACN is, in my opinion, the single greatest entrepreneurial opportunity for the average person in the world." As the years passed, Orin also came to realize that ACN is about far more than just building a healthy income. It allows him to chart his own course through life. "I just love the freedom I have," he says. "I can make my own schedule. I can do what I want, when I want."

Today Orin heads a growing team from his home in Maryland, where he lives with his wife, Angela, and their three sons—12-year-old twins Jason and Jordan and 15-year-old Jacob. As his own boss, Orin has the luxury of being a hands-on dad and husband. "I can attend my kids' basketball games, track meets, their lacrosse games," he says. "I get to spend a lot more time with my wife. It's wonderful." They've also traveled the world, enjoying visits to amazing destinations such as Barcelona, Jamaica, Turks and Caicos and the Mediterranean.

Orin wants that same level of success for his team members and continually encourages them to set goals and fight for their dreams. In addition to one-on-one mentoring, he hosts webinars, holiday parties and summer barbecues to keep everyone connected and energized. "It's the most exciting feeling to see people you've worked with get promoted," he says. "They go from living paycheck to paycheck to being able to buy their own home or pay their car off. We're not just business partners; we're friends." ■
